Let's Explore!

John and the group go to learn how to dance the tango. What is the first thing he has to do?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Teacher: OK, everybody watching? You can't learn what to do if you can't see.
- John: Everyone is watching me?? Oh, no!
- Teacher: OK, first thing is to decide who leads. One person guides the other through the dance steps. It's customary for the man to lead.
- John: That's you, right?
- Teacher: Yes. For today, I'm the man. You have to concentrate on your feet and keep your hips straight. If you move your upper body, the dance is ruined.
- John: So, I have to be in constant motion, right?
- Teacher: Yes. Women wear high heels and men wear suits - it's important to look put together.
- John: The tango is called " the saddest dance". Why?
- Teacher: The music has a sombre quality to it. It's about loss and longing.
- John: When we dance the tango, look serious, right?

Learning Points

The Zero Conditional

You use the zero conditional to talk about general truths and certainties and to give instructions.

There are two parts to the sentence.

One part is the condition. The other part is the result.
When you want to give an instruction, use the imperative in the main clause.

Form:

if or when + subject + the Simple Present tense/Imperative

You can flip the two parts of the sentence so that the result comes first.

Subject + The Simple Present tense/Imperative + if or when + subject + the Simple Present

Condition	Result
If you move your upper body,	the dance is ruined.
When you dance the tango,	look serious.

Result	Condition
You can't learn what to do	if you can't see.

Notice that you only need a comma (,) if you say the condition first.
